SAGE vs. Other Full-Text Providers

Journal titles are stable; Titles don't just come and go.

Up-to-date content; No embargoes (current content available when published).

100% peer-reviewed content.

Cited reference linking within each Collection to other articles within the same and other Collections.

Deep Access and Immediate Retrievability.

Online vs. Print

Online access allows users access to additional content (all peer reviewed journals) that are contained in the Collections that they are not currently receiving via print.

Online access allows users to access invaluable retrospective content contained in backfile.

Online access gives users the ability to search across all Collections titles simultaneously, as well as cross database search with any existing CSA subscriptions

Online access allows librarians to save valuable shelf space.

Online access via the Collections allows for a considerable cost per article savings.

Online access allows for the retrieval of content in full-text.

Online access enables users to electronically browse both table of contents and articles on an individual title basis.

Online access allows for both basic and advanced searches (including the ability to search full-text of articles).

Online access includes valuable Thesaurus-based indexing.

Features on CSA Illumina

Browsing Mode: Browse mode allows users to view the table of contents and view the full-text of individual articles. In addition, you can limit your search to the content within an individual title. Both backfile and current issues of Journals contained within the Collections will be available for browsing. All significant content including the Letters to the Editor, book reviews, notes, etc. will be available to view, print, and download.

Within Collections: Cited references within any article from a SAGE Full-Text Collection will be hyperlinked to other full-text articles within that Collection.

Linking from CSA Databases: If you currently subscribe to any relevant CSA abstracts database (i.e. Social Science based abstracts such as CSA Sociological Abstracts or CSA Worldwide Political Science Abstracts) along with any SAGE Full-Text Collection, then the abstracts will be linked directly to the articles within that SAGE Full-Text Collection.

Searching Mode: Users can search across specified SAGE Full-Text Collections, or if they currently subscribe to other databases on CSA Illumina, they have the option to search across CSA Illumina databases as well as the SAGE Full-Text Collections at the same time. Search results are presented for each database or Collection separately.

These are all included with your IDS account at no extra charge
